Lucknow: Students of Babasaheb Bhimrao Ambedkar University (BBAU) won't have to spend too much time locating books and reading material at the university's library from the new academic session. The university has adopted library automation that has allowed for an online database of the collection at the library.

The journals available in the library would also be available anywhere in the world with remote access facility. "Students can easily find books through an online catalogue system," said librarian Sunil Gorla.

Approximately 9,000 e-journals of the university can be accessed by students from any part of the world.
